The speaker - Professor Jeremy Tuman, faculty in Department of English in Xavier University of Louisiana U.S.A and also the Director of first year composition. He is also the Editor of Pathways Xavier's first year student essay journal.

He spoke on shift in composition in recent years towards career preparation skills that also called as Transfer skills, which mirrors a move in universities as a whole, beginning with open enrollment era of the late 1970s.

He also focused on traditional modes of discourse that are still important including argument, narrative, comparison, description, but gave special emphasis to the modes of summary and analysis.
